A CHINCH BUG PREVENTIVE.

For the last three years the farmers throughout Wisconsin have had their els per acre, completely destroyed in three or four days by the ravages of these little insects, and instead of 30 bushels per sore the farmer would not get his seed back. I had a field of eight acres that was destroyed in that manner last year; so last spring we determined to try an experiment with them, and sowed the same fields to wheat and of the same variety. The land was plowed very deep in the fall and the wheat was sown about the 20th of April on the fall plowing, using a broadcast seeder and cultivator for that purpose. I went over the field with the cultivator once before sowing and again while sowing, finishing up with the harrow. When the wheat was about two inches high, I want over it with a heavy roller, and then sowed 100 pounds of land planter per acre; but on the places where the chinch bugs had commenced and were worst the year before, I sowed a double quantity; the result was, the field headed over even, straw strong and heavy, and all stood up until harvested, and when ripe was of a bright yellowno appearance of rust or chinch bug to be seen. When threshed the field vielded 25 bushels per acre of clean wheat that weighed 60 pounds to the bushel; and right here I would say that in the places where 200 pounds of salt were sown the wheat was considerably heavier; so next year I shall sow 200 CHAIN PUMPS, pounds to the sort and too the result.

The radiolating word, exhibiting ten-acres, was sown to wheat at the same time, and of the same, variety, subject to the hims treatment in every respect, extenting there was he salt or plaster sown. The year before it raised a crop of barley, and was in good condition to grown large orop, of wheat The wheat came up good, and looked well until after heading out, and up to this time promised to be as good a crop as the other field; but just about the time the grain was forming in the head, we no-ticed it turning white in spots, and in

THE editor of the Arcela Record thus follows the example of the illustrious Mr. Wegg, and drops into poetry: Twas down in Cornceb alley, a drunkard reeled along; he tried to heave a note or two of a bacchanalian song. Full soon he came upon a spot, where a hog slopt in the mire, and he also laid him down to rost: this raised his hogship's ire. Straightway that porker did raise up, with a most contemptuous grunt, toddled off adown the late, another bed to hunt. Now, tippler, ere you sink so low, go don the red or blue, lest even hogs may refuse to share their beds of mire with you."

Wasatiand, III., March 8, 1878 Eds Republican —We had the pleas ure on last Wednesday of visiting the Wheatland school, taught by Mr L A McDaniel,—this being the last day of the fall and winter term, and although the weather was very unfit for such occasions it did not interfere with their calculations much. The furezoon was spent in the and bountiful supply of "good things was spried by the school and its numer ous friends After thanks being offered by Mr A F Hopkins, all partook of the food till their appetites were satisfied In the afternoon the scholars were rewarded with prizes, according to these conduct and attendance. After several short speeches by friends of the school, Mr McDaniel made a few remarks, in which he wished his scholars a long and prosperous life, and a happy eternity -After which the school closed with the announcing of an entertainment later m the evening

We returned at the stated time, and found the house well lit up; and its watth that had been graced during the day with the name "Evergreen College," (a name given it by a neighboring school), looked all the better in the lamplight. Also we noticed on the board a rather odd yet beautiful crayen drawing, which repre sented its meaning admurably well After spelling down twice, which occupied 11 hours, a short intermission was given --Then came a few speeches, dialogues, select readings, and best and last of all, the "Wheatland Courier," which was full of news of its kind, and for which we give its editors much credit

EDS REPUBLICAN —We had the pleas ogized. They smelled mighty strong of whisky. Kraft said to the woman Light absorbed She squeaked sur, I can it I want to "Kraft said ure on lest Wednesday of visiting the Wheatland school, taught by Mr L A McDaniel,—this being the last day of the he had been following the woman a year fall and winter term, and although the and a half to keep her from falling, and weather was very unit for such occasion it did not interfere with their calculation much. The ferences was spent in the usual recitations. At noon a large and bountiful supply of "good things" was sprind by the school and its numer ous friends. After thanks being offend by Mr. A. F. Hopkins, all partook of the food till their appetites were satisfied

In the afternoon the scholars were rewarded with prizes, according to these conduct and attendance. After several short speeches by friends of the school, Mr McDaniel made a few remarks, in which he wished his scholars a long and prosperous life, and a happy eternity -After which the school closed with the announcing of an entertainment later m the ovening

We returned at the stated time, and found the house well lit up; and its wath, that had been graced during the day with the name "Evergreen College," (a name given it by a neighboring school), looked all the better in the lamplight. Also we noticed on the board a rather odd yet beautiful crayon drawing, which repre sented its meaning admirably well. After spelling down twice, which occupied 11 hours, a short intermission was given -Then came a few speeches, dialogues, select readings, and best and last of all, the "Wheatland Courier," which was full of news of its kind, and for which we give its editors much credit

In the end where the lowest plants one were sol. now the taller ones may be placed; here a convex group, and there presenting a concave appearance. Drooping plants on elevated shelves, and hanging baskets from the roof, make little paradises of variety in what were once unbearable monotony. Cardeners often wish to know the secret of maintaining a continued interest, on the part of their em ployes, in their handiwork, and this is one of the most potent-continued change and variety in the appearance of everything.
